FEBRUARY 23, 2011

Like the predictability of tulips in spring, anti-pesticide crusader Diane Czyzewski appeared befrc council Tuesday to talk about problems cropping up with the new bylaw.

Czyzewski said instead of putting up warning signs themselves before applying pesticides, some companies are giving the signs to their customers.

And some of those customers aren't posting as per the City bylaw that came into effect last yea

Mayor Peter Milobar said his understanding is the companies can do that and if the customers c the signs up as they should, the company won't spray.
