Pesticide notification registration now open

Hayley Cooper

2/14/2012

The City of Kelowna is accepting applications from residents who want to be notified about pesticide spraying in their neighbourhoods.

Environment and Land Use Manager, Todd Cashin says those that wish to be informed when pesticide spraying occurs have until March 15th to get their paperwork into Kelowna's Pesticide Notification Registry.

Cashin says 300 people registered last year.

"The numbers increase more and more every year. There are folks that have kids or animals in their yard, more and more people have organic fruit trees, bird feeders, that type of thing."

The City's pesticide bylaw came into effect Jan. 1, 2009 and restricts the use of non-essential pesticides by homeowners on residential properties.
