

SECTIONS

Trade - 2011

[27-May-11] Dow Agrosciences used and abused NAFTA in pesticide spat, says Council of Canadians

[19-May-11] Stop trading rights to curry favour with US, says Council of Canadians

[29-Apr-11] On Eve of Election, Harper's EU Trade Agenda Challenged in Party Survey

[27-Apr-11] Elections 2011 - Canada's Free Trade agenda: Dissing democracy and rewarding despots

[21-Apr-11] Another Doha Round Deadline Failure: Why Yesterday's Solution to Yesterday's Agenda is No Longer In Demand in Today's Global Economy

[14-Apr-11] International Call for G-20 Action on WTO Financial Deregulation

[12-Apr-11] Canada-EU trade negotiations go ahead this week in further contempt of Parliament

[08-Apr-11] Canadian lobbying against EU climate policy must end, says joint letter ahead of trade talks

[06-Apr-11] Election postpones Canada-EU trade offers; now is the time to debate the deal, says Council of Canadians

[04-Apr-11] Canada must cease its lobbying against EU climate policy, says Council of Canadians

[31-Mar-11] Atlantic Canada should reject Harper's false trade promises

[28-Mar-11] Canada-European Union trade talks must be put on hold during election campaign, says Council of Canadians

[14-Mar-11] First Anniversary Update on Complaint filed

MEDIA RELEASE

For Immediate Release
May 27, 2011

Dow Agrosciences used and abused NAFTA in pesticide spat, says Council of Canadians

Ottawa – The Council of Canadians is disturbed by preliminary accounts of a settlement between the Government of Canada and Dow Agrosciences in the firm's NAFTA challenge to Quebec's cosmetic pesticide ban. While the Supreme Court decision upholding the legality of provincial and municipal pesticide bans still holds, the very existence of an investor-state dispute settlement process in NAFTA and other trade agreements, with the power to overrule court or government decisions, threatens environmental and public policymaking in Canada, says the organization.

"Dow Agrosciences should never have had the option of challenging Quebec's pesticide ban in front of a private, closed door hearing. Why should unelected, secretive NAFTA trade panels have any say on whether environmental policies are legitimate or not?" asks Maude Barlow, national chairperson with the Council of Canadians. "These are decisions that must be made democratically by local, provincial or national governments, without fear that important environmental measures will be challenged by foreign investors."

In 2009, Dow Agrosciences sued the federal government using NAFTA's investor-state dispute process over Quebec's ban on the residential use of pesticides. The U.S.-based company, maker of the herbicide 2,4-D, claimed $2 million in damages from the ban, which it called tantamount to expropriation. Yesterday's settlement did not involve a payout to Dow, but the Quebec government has apparently agreed to a statement that "products containing 2,4-D do not pose an unacceptable risk to human health or the environment, provided that the instructions on their label are followed."

While the pesticide bans in Quebec and other jurisdictions will stay in place, Dow Agrosciences declared the settlement a victory, as commentators note the NAFTA case may discourage other Canadian governments at the local or provincial level from moving ahead with their own bans. The case proves yet again that NAFTA's investment protections offer little of public value, while granting corporations extra-constitutional rights to challenge environmental or public health rules which they believe interfere with profits.

The Australian government decided this year not to include investor-state dispute settlement in its bilateral and multilateral free trade agreements. Its new trade policy states, "Foreign businesses investing in Australia will be entitled to the same legal protections as domestic businesses but the Gillard Government will not confer greater rights on foreign businesses through investor-state dispute resolution provisions."

The Gillard trade policy reasonably concludes that Australia's legal system can handle investment disputes at home, and, "If Australian businesses are concerned about sovereign risk in Australian trading partner countries, they will need to make their own assessments about whether they want to commit to investing in those countries." Governments in Ecuador and elsewhere in Latin America are also cancelling bilateral investment treaties with developed countries for the way foreign firms, including Canadian resource companies, use them to challenge environmental and development-related policy.

"If Canada took the same position as these countries, we might have avoided paying $130 million to AbitibiBowater last year when the firm sued the federal government under NAFTA instead of going through domestic courts," says Stuart Trew, trade campaigner with the Council of Canadians. "We should take a page from the Australian government by reviewing the investor-state process in NAFTA and other trade deals to see if the costs have outweighed the benefits. At home and abroad, the evidence shows investor-state disputes are a regressive corporate tool with no public value."

-30-

For more information:

Dylan Penner, media officer: dpenner@canadians.org; (613) 795-8685 ; Twitter: @CouncilofCDNs

MEDIA ARCHIVES

Trade

- 2010
- 2009
- 2008
- 2007
- 2006
- 2005
- 2004

Support our work and join/donate now!

Sign up for email updates, e-newsletter, media, events:

HTML Text AOL

with RCMP over Canadian Mining Company's Apparent Involvement in Mexican Corruption Case

- 2003
- 2002
- 2001
- 2000
- 1999
- 1998
- 1997

[08-Mar-11] AbitibiBowater NAFTA settlement has privatized Canadian water, trade committee hears

[03-Mar-11] Council of Canadians opposes LSE takeover of TMX at public hearings

[24-Feb-11] Canada-EU trade deal will hurt climate policy regardless of EU decision on tar sands

[31-Jan-11] Tar Sands protest at the Canadian High Commission marks Minister's visit

[17-Jan-11] Stop Tar Sands Trade Talks

« back to media index

Search our site:

home | contact | privacy | site map | events | français

700-170 Laurier Avenue West Ottawa, ON, K1P 5V5 CA; Tel: (613) 233-2773 ; 1-800-387-7177
Fax: (613) 233-6776; inquiries@canadians.org; © The Council of Canadians, 2006